Possible compromise:

Legislation may bring future state office buildings

■ State's Consumer Affairs, Highway Patrol headquarters could find their way to West Sac

By Steve Marschke

West Sacramento officials are negotiating with the state Department of General Services and with the office of State Senator Patrick Johnston (D-Stockton) to make new legislation that could finally bring state office buildings to West Sacramento.

West Sacramento leaders are unhappy over a recent state decision to select Sacramento sites for two major new state offices, and have threatened to stall the developments with challenges to the projects' environmental impact reports or other litigation. By negotiating to bring future office projects to the city, state officials hope to defuse West Sacramento's opposition.

"General Services is concerned about where West Sacramento is headed," said Wes Beers, West Sacramento's mayor. "They're afraid of the (selection and construction) process stopping. I see them looking at the unravelling of the process they started."

West Sacramento's city leaders have claimed the General Services department did not stick to its own guidelines in its selection of Sacramento sites for new headquarters for the state Environmental Protection Agency and the state Department of Health Services. After a heated round of bidding and deliberation, West Sacramento proposals such as the Lighthouse Marina Project, Raley's Landing and the "Triangle" waterfront area were edged out of the competition.

By negotiating with the state and developing new legislation through Johnston's office, West Sacramento hopes to be assured of a couple of future state office projects to help develop a new downtown area along the river.

One of the new headquarter buildings under negotiation, said Beers, is the state Department of Consumer Affairs -- a multi-phase project which would begin with 300,000 square feet and could eventually reach a million square feet. In contrast, Sacramento's new Wells Fargo building is about 500,000 square feet of office space.

Another possible West Sacramento project is the California Highway Patrol headquarters, planned for about 250,000 square feet.

"We believe the CHP headquarters would be a nice fit in this community, since we already have the CHP Academy," said Beers.

Less likely for West Sacramento, said the mayor, is the new State Corrections building. That facility would reach about 500,000 square feet, but is being favored for downtown Sacramento, he said.

Exactly where in West Sacramento any of these projects would land has not been determined, he added.

"That would all have to be negotiated as part of the bill," Beers commented.

A Man for All Seasons

Spring production by River City High School

King Henry VIII (Michael Woods) in a contemplative moment during rehearsal for River City High School's new drama production. The play begins tomorrow.

A MAN FOR ALL SEASONS, River City's Drama Department's spring play, opens tomorrow, March 10 at 8 p.m. at Yolo High School for a three-day run. Friday night is the Art Booster Club's gala theater party honoring the cast and crew. Information about the play productions and the theater party can be obtained by calling River City High School, 371-0700. Checks for reservations can be sent to the high school, 1100 Clarendon St., made out to ABC.

The first week of the play had to be cancelled because of chicken pox, so the community will only have three days to see this production, which has been in rehearsal since last fall.

The drama department, under the direction of Roy Engoron, has produced outstanding productions. They are noteworthy for the quality of acting, the use of state-of-the-art lighting and sound, settings and costumes that carry the audience into the world of the play period, and the choice of outstanding plays. A MAN FOR ALL SEASONS depicts the family life of Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor for Henry VIII of England. More, a scholar, author of Utopia, an attorney, and member of Parliament, was tried for treason and beheaded in the controversy over the divorce of Henry from Queen Catherine and his marriage to Anne Boleyn. Robert Bolt, the author of the play, has made of the real life drama of the conflict facing the Lord Chancellor a triumph of right and a powerful and satisfying play which the community can enjoy this weekend.

Artist's exhibit shows Native American culture

Suzanne Smaith with artist Adam Pierce and painting "Minko Pelichi" ("Chief")

By Betty Fairbairn Sokolich
Art Exhibit Chairperson
East Yolo Friends of the Library

The question about the meaning of life and the search for self-identification has been a constant quest of religion and philosophy throughout the ages. To "find one's self" can be even more of a struggle when the person is caught between two cultures but it also gives an artist a strong emotional motivation to express the tug of two cultures he inherits by birth.

Adam Pierce, on the threshhold of his adult life, has been encountering the need to clarify in his own being which culture is to be dominant in his life or how he can integrate having a Choctaw maternal heritage and a paternal Caucasian background. Adam has, for the last two semesters at California College of Arts and Crafts, been investigating his Native American heritage by learning about the culture, religion, language, and values of the Choctaw.

The more he has learned about these ideas and concepts, the more they become the content of his work. The exhibit illustrates his emotional journey to merge the traditional culture with contemporary times from his own personal perspective.

YO PISACHI (to display) shows a tormented face mask with sad brooding eyes, black hair hanging limply around the face mask which sits on a pedestal to express the sorrow of the artist that Native American sacred objects are so frequently taken away from their source and exhibited as art objects with no understanding of their spirituality. The warm color of burnt sienna is contrasted with the yellow green of the background.

Sac, West Sac killings may be linked

Victims both acquainted with man arrested last week

By Steve Marschke

Sacramento and West Sacramento police believe they may have found a link between two across-the-river killings.

On Monday, Feb. 28, the body of Wasi Khan Sarwar was found in a warehouse district in West Sacramento, possibly some time after he was shot to death.

The next day, Israel Reyes Jr., 26, was found on the steps of the Arco Arena, also shot to death.

Later that day, West Sacramento police stopped two people on drug charges, and found out that the two were in Reyes' car. They later learned that both shooting victims were acquainted with the driver.

"The subject we arrested for possession of methamphetamine was in the vehicle that belonged to their victim, and also knew our victim," said Sgt. Rick Mayoral of the West Sacramento Police Department. "There were also similarities in the way they were killed.

Mayoral said the case remains a mystery because, although both victims were known drug users, neither was known to deal in drugs. So a drug-related killing did not seem very likely.

City officials set out bait to attract major retailers

■ $3.3 million tax subsidy hoped to spur development of "big box" retail

By Steve Marschke

West Sacramento redevelopment officials hope a city decision to subsidize commercial development will bring some long-awaited retail businesses to the city's northwest area.

Following a December approval by the city council, West Sacramento stands ready to reimburse the first major tenant at the 100-acre Riverpoint development (near Reed Ave. and I-80) $2.5 million from the city's future redevelopment agency income. The money will be awarded as a reimbursement to property tax assessments for the first Riverpoint tenant who brings on line at least 240,000 square feet of commercial development.

An additional $821,000 is offered to the firm bringing on line the next 181,000 square feet.

"The proposal will generate overall, between property taxes and sales taxes, more than the redevelopment agency will have to pay," said Val Toppenberg, deputy director of the redevelopment agency.

Toppenberg said that the city general fund -- which primarily funds police, fire and parks services -- will especially benefit from new sales taxes. The redevelopment agency, though, could take a loss if property tax income doesn't immediately cover the developer subsidy.

In areas within the redevelopment agency, about 11 percent of the property tax increment goes to Yolo County. Another 20 percent goes to the city redevelopment agency's housing fund, and the balance goes into the redevelopment agency's general coffers.

A penny from every 7.25 cents in sales tax goes to the city general fund, making retail businesses a sought-after commodity for nearly every municipality.

The city of West Sacramento has tried unsuccessfully for several years to market the area to "big box" retailers, including businesses such as CostCo, Walmart, Home Depot, and other retailers.

Key to attracting such businesses is the population within the market area -- an area which cannot depend on West Sacramento residents alone.

"A population of about 250,000 is needed in the market area," said Toppenberg, "and West Sacramento isn't enough on its own. We look at everything from downtown Sacramento, to the Natomas area, to Davis as being within the market area."

West Sacramento has a population of about 30,000, but with the freeway access of the Riverpoint area, city officials hope to soon win their battle to attract a regional retailer.

Drug use among youth on the rise

'Yolo Unite' calls for renewal of drug prevention efforts

from Andy Porras
Yolo Unite

Headlines heralding a dramatic rise in the use of marijuana, inhalants and LSD by America's teens have been appearing in both newspapers and news magazines.

A recent survey sponsored by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) revealed that the use of drugs by school-aged youths increased significantly between 1992 and 1993.

What does all of this mean to Yolo County? Are these findings a warning signal or an urgent alarm?

At the national level, Health and Human Services secretary Donna E. Shalala is urging America to act immediately and pledges her support to step up efforts to alter the trend. Ms. Shalala has contacted the presidents of broadcast networks, film studios, record companies, and professional sports to urge them to rededicate themselves to getting the message out about prevention.

The NIDA information reveals that 8th, 10th, and 12th grade student drug use increased almost three percent from 1992 to 1993. About the only good news found was the fact that this age group of youngsters remained well below the peak level recorded in the early 1990's.

Yolo County school officials hope today's juniors and seniors are not being taken by the erroneous messages glamorizing drugs, alcohol and cigarettes.

Alcohol and cigarettes, the figures show, are still the most widely used legal drugs among the nation's youths at all grade levels.

It is not uncommon for youngsters to go on heavy drinking binges during their eighth grade year or as high school seniors, NIDA officials discovered.

Good news turned to bad news when NIDA officials reported that smoking, which generally had been steady for nearly a decade, is now on the rise.

NIDA figures indicate that their findings cut across all socioeconomic levels. They also revealed that, contrary to conventional wisdom, minorities reflected the lowest rates of use for virtually all drugs.

Latinos, for example, have different family values. Most of these high school age youngsters still believe in honoring their parents, not embarrassing them.

All in all, the report is a disturbing finding that emphasizes the need for immediate action in combating both illicit and legal drug use by young people.

Yolo County parents know that curbing drug use is not the sole task of schools or agencies. Those wishing to help step up efforts to alter the current trend can do so by becoming involved in their children's schools. Others can act as volunteers in community organizations whose agendas include substance abuse awareness.

America was lulled into a false sense of security by a declining trend of drug use in the past. It's time for another rude awakening.

You may have read last week that the East Yolo Friends of the Library recently had a change of officers, but are you familiar with just what "Friends" is and what they do for the people in our community?

According to Stuart Knox, former president for the past two years, "Friends" is a service organization, "Designed to help augment special programs for the Turner Library." The funding for the Arthur F. Turner Branch, Yolo County Library comes from Yolo County (and Friends). And Yolo, like most counties these days, is on a tight budget. Without Friends, it is doubtful that these special programs would be available.

It is because of Friends' support that the library is able to provide various children's programs, including storytime, puppet shows, guest speakers, and special holiday programs, to name a few. They've also sponsored an amnesty program to give children with overdue fines a second chance to borrow.

In addition to the children's programs, Friends also helps to maintain the exterior and interior of the library, and supports a number of other projects, including art exhibits, a typewriter for public use, engraving tools for "Operation I.D.," filmstrips, programs for adults, and bus tickets for project "To the Library."

The needs that Friends of the Library address are sometimes identified by the library and sometimes by Friends; the two work closely together. A pencil machine was set up, for instance, when they realized that a lot of people (especially kids), will come to the library without a pencil. So they started to make pencils available in a dispenser for $.25. It's a simple, but apparently important need that they recognized and responded to, since, says Stuart, "It's really popular, we sell a lot of pencils!"

Friends of the Library is made up entirely of volunteers. They get their funding through fundraisers, such as used book and magazine sales. Funding also comes from the annual plant sale by the Potted Planters, held once a year at the Kiwanis Pancake Breakfast. Many local businesses also support Friends, as do individuals with (cash) donations.

The members of Friends currently meet once a month, the third Thursday at 4 p.m. in the library. Anyone is welcome to attend, says Stuart, "We're always looking for active members." It costs $1 per year to be a member, and you can dictate your own level of activity in Friends (although they certainly appreciate as much time as you can make available).

For more information, or to confirm that a meeting is being held, contact the library at 371-9274.

Interviewing

With thousands of workers seeking employment in today's turbulent job market, any small edge over the competition can make the difference. The CSUS department of Regional & Continuing Education is offering you an edge in the interviewing process, through a three-day seminar that helps build effective interviewing skills. The seminar on interviewing techniques is scheduled to meet in the CSUS campus library, room 53, on March 28 and 29, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and April 23 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. It will be instructed by Susan S. Tynan, a part-time faculty member and full-time academic advisor in the CSUS School of Business Administration. Participants will have the opportunity to meet experienced representatives from local businesses and government agencies and participate in "simulated" interviews. The fee is $95 per person and 1 academic unit is awarded upon completion. The seminar is open to everyone, with no formal admittance to the University. For more information call 923-9833.

Tours of preserve to begin

Guided tours of The Nature Conservancy's Jepson Prairie Preserve will begin on Saturday, March 12, and continue every Saturday and Sunday through May 15.

At 10 a.m. each weekend morning, volunteer docents will lead visitors into the virgin grasslands and to the vernal pools to see the unique plants and wildlife which were part of the dominant habitat in the Central Valley before European settlement.

Controlled burns in late 1993 have cleared years of thatch, and abundant flowering in the grassland areas should follow. Groups of 4 or more should make reservations by leaving a message with telephone number for reply at 752-6949. A short, self-guided nature trail is also available for visitors.

To reach Jepson Prairie Preserve, take Highway 113 south from I-80. Twelve miles south of Dixon, where 113 turns east at an overhead warning light, continue straight onto the gravel road, Cook Lane, and cross the railroad tracks to the parking area.

The preserve is managed for The Nature Conservancy by the University of California Natural Reserve System and the Solano Open Space Foundation and was designated a National Natural Landmark in 1982.

City of West Sac to offer free classes in backyard composting

The city of West Sacramento is sponsoring four free backyard composting workshops on March 19, 23 and 26. Participants will receive a free composting bin and learn how to convert their organic waste — such as yard clippings and kitchen scraps — into valuable compost which can help improve the texture and fertility of their garden soil. Registration forms are included in the March refuse bills. Last fall, over 130 residents participated in the backyard composting workshops.

State law mandates that all cities in California reduce the amount of waste they send to landfills by 25% by 1995 and 50% by the year 2000. In West Sacramento, approximately 30% of household wastes going to the landfill consists of grass, leaves, and food waste. All of these materials are readily compostable. Wouldn't you prefer to see your garden grow rather than the landfills?

For questions or registration information, contact the city recycling coordinator, Jill Holbert, at 373-5810.

Spring: the joys of warm weather, mosquitos

Spring has indeed sprung, as they say, and all around us are signs that West Sacramento is shaking off its winter gloom.

Sports organizers are advertising signups for football and little league.

Politicians are gearing up too, inviting you to attend their fundraisers or, better yet, simply send them your money in preparation for the June elections.

The weather, of course, is warmer and drier than it was a month ago.

And a little morning mist still hangs about on lucky mornings, turning the Sacramento riverfront into a pretty watercolor in this, arguably the most pleasant and optimistic time of the year in West Sacramento.

All of which adds up to a nice splash of color and motion in the year, sandwiched between the gray winter behind us and the sluggish summer heat ahead. . .

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS

The Sacramento Rver registered one foot eleven inches U.-S. gauge at the Southern Pacific bridge yesterday. This reading was taken at a time when the tide was low and really is not an indication of the depth of the stream except as it relates to the gauge placed by the Government several years ago. The actual depth of the river at the point where the gauge is located is about eight feet, but that is in the channel of the stream where the current runs swiftly. Steamers drawing five and six feet of water experience no difficulty in taking passengers from the wharves of Sacramento to San Francisco.

Popular comment has been heard around town in favorable tones commenting on the manner in which the Saturday evening dances are being conducted in the town hall. Mrs. Gilstrap, who conducts these dances, is highly elated over the patronage and the conduct of the young people who attend the dances and promises to continue them during the fall and winter seasons.

Mrs. Louise Smith, with her grandnephew, Charles Leinberger, are making preparations to go to San Francisco for the Diamond Jubilee which commences on September 6th. They will return, however, to spend a few days at the State Fair.

Deeds for rights-of-way for the extension of water mains, electric light wires and other public utilities through Westgate to connect with all homes now being built in the district have been placed on record in the County Recorder's Office, Woodland. All homes being built in the district will be connected immediately on completion and on request of the owners.

Last Tuesday, at a general meeting of the directors of the Central California Development Company held in San Francisco, James P. McAnulty was named secretary of the corporation and T. D. McAnulty was named manager of the affairs in Westgate. The general office of the corporation will be moved from San Francisco to Sacramento and will be under the immediate and personal control of T. D. McAnulty and James P. McAnulty.

C. Lindquist and family form the latest addition to the Westgate suburb. The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Lindquist and two boys. They have already made their home in the old Kripp home near West Sacramento headquarters. Mr. Lindquist is an ironworker and has already secured employment in Sacramento, with the probability that he will be a permanent employe of the Palm Iron Works.

The Stewart Feed Company of Sacramento, having headquarters at 30th and N Streets, is enlarging its warehouse in Westgate by the addition of a wing thirty feet wide and seventy feet in length. It was only last year that this warehouse was built, but owing to a sharp increase in business the owners found it necessary to make the addition mentioned above. The warehouse is used for storing hay, feed, grain and other farm products, and is very convenient in the location it occupies, close to the farming community south of Westgate.

The West Side Auto Camp, under the direction of J. J. McNally, is having eighteen of its tent houses remodeled and enlarged so that each cabin will consist of two permanent rooms. Since the camp was laid out, accommodations were provided in only one room with a canvas top, but now that prosperity has blessed the owners the improvement specified is being made.

J. N. Carroll is another late addition to the business community of Washington, where he has established a soft drink place and an auto sales yard for used cars and trucks. The location of his place of business is at Fifth and Margaret Streets, and he reports that although the location is somewhat out of the way he has been doing wonderfully well since he started the business. He has taken a lease for five years on what is known as the old Warner property, which consists of vacant land measuring 100x160 feet. Carroll has a reputation as a steeplejack or human fly. In every county seat of the state he has done work in this line and has also worked on the dome of the Capitol Building in Sacramento. To keep busy during dull periods he established the used car yard, and since its establishment his efforts have been crowned with success.

Word was received yesterday from Mrs. Joe Pereira that she is rapidly regaining her health in a retreat near Nevada City. Her daughter, Pauline, and her son, Fred, are with her, and both have started to attend school in the mountain town. Probably she will remain there during the coming winter.

Owing to the absence of the secretary last Tuesday evening, the meeting of the Washington Boosters' Club developed into an informal affair, with some lively discussion on affairs pertaining to the community. No particular subject was taken up, except that the writer was requested to look into the difficulty that may be experienced later on if the current of the river is shut off from the intake of the Washington water works. A report on that subject will be rendered next Tuesday evening.

Before Judge Barry's court only one case of a criminal character is pending, namely, that of Morley Henderson of Sacramento, who was arrested by Traffic Officer Jacobs for parking on the pavement of the state highway west of town. Canned Heat Consumers Give Desperate Battle to Officers After All Night Booze Orgy

The desperate state of affairs that gradually creeps on the State of California and other states of the Union under the Volstead Law can only sometimes be realized when victims or addicts to the use of canned heat and denatured alcohol lose all sense of fairness, or justice, or reason.

Early Wednesday morning a riot call came to Constable Wilson's house from the neighborhood of the rice mills in West Sacramento. After an all-night booze orgy about twenty vagrants had divided into two camps opposing each other, and with death-dealing arms threatened to annihilate each other.

Calling to his help Deputy Sheriff C. Newton, Constable Wilson proceeded to the locality and tried to stem the battle.

Newton, having just arrived at his home from his run on the Southern Pacific lines where he is engaged as conductor, went to the scene of the battle unarmed, Fortunately, Constable Wilson had his gun.

In a short time the gang was routed and driven across the M Street bridge to Sacramento, where they belonged. But it was not until that leader, Guadalupe Pedro Lopez, had battled desperately with the officers, slashed Newton with a razor in such manner that only Newton's speed saved him having his head severed from his shoulders, and with Lopez finally shot down by Constable Wilson, that the officers were able to gain the upper hand on the maddened canned heat victims.

Lopez is now lodged in the county jail, with the bullet which finally subdued him still in his body. He faces a long penitentiary term on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder. To this will probably be added the charge of murderous assault upon an officer in the lawful discharge of his duty.

The leader of the attacking vagrants was brought to Woodland by Wilson and Newton shortly after 8 o'clock this morning. He was taken to the Woodland Clinic for treatment of his wound, but his attitude there was so threatening toward the Clinic attendants that the officers decided to place him in jail for safe keeping until such time as the county physician would have time to handle his case.

Constable Wilson received a riot call at his home shortly before 6 o'clock this morning. He was notified that a group of vagrants, evidently having spent the night in an orgy of canned heat drinking, were rioting along the river bank near the M street bridge.

Wilson was informed that there were nearly a score in the group and deemed it advisable to summon assistance before attempting the task of cleaning out the nest of rioting vagrants. He stopped at the home of Charles Newton on the way to the scene, summoning Newton, who is a deputy sheriff.

Newton, who is also a railroad man, had just returned from his regular run. Believing that the case was one of the usual "canned heat" affairs, that the vagrants would recognize the authority of the officers and give no trouble when ordered, and because of the fact that Wilson was in such a hurry to reach the scene, Newton did not return to his home for the purpose of arming himself, as he would ordinarily when a riot call is received.

When the officers arrived at the scene they found the group of canned heat drinkers in a general melee. When the officers ordered them to cease their disturbance and move over into Sacramento they hesitated in their fighting for a moment.

Then, the officers state, Lopez, clearly the leader of one faction, turned to become leader of the entire group in a general attack upon the officers.

Lopez leaped upon Newton, evidently noting that he was unarmed, and made a desperate lunge at him with a razor of the type used by barbers, the officers state. Newton dodged just in time to escape having his throat ripped with the blade, but it cut a long slash in the crown of his heavy felt hat and went through to the scalp.

Straightening up and catching Lopez off balance, Newton delivered a terrific blow upon the Mexican's jaw, knocking him down. However, Lopez was up instantly, the officers state, renewing the attack.

In the meantime Constable Wilson had been busily engaged with the other attackers. Finally, he saw that ordinary methods would not suffice and drew his revolver, holding the rest of the group off, but unable to devote his attention to them and also aid Newton.

As Lopez arose to renew his attack upon Newton the latter reached down and picked up a heavy stone. Then as Lopez closed in, clearly mad with rage and liquor, the officer hurled the stone straight at him, striking him under the eye and again knocking him down.

But even that could not stop Lopez, the officers state. He rose again and once more charged upon Newton. At this point Wilson realized that only drastic action would suffice, the rest of the crowd evidently becoming emboldened by their leader's exhibition and closing in upon the two officers.

Wilson thereupon drew his revolver and shot Lopez down. He did not wish to kill the man, and in order to stop him shot him in the hip.

With their leader down, the rest of the group turned and fled across the bridge. Newton and Wilson were occupied with Lopez and unable to give chase, but it was believed the Sacramento police would round up some of the group later on.

FIRE CAUSED SERIOUS LOSS TO W. G. MEDLIN PREMISES

Last Wednesday afternoon, from some unknown cause, the garate lately built by W. G. Medlin near his new home on Jefferson Blvd, in the southern end of the West Sacramento district, was found to be ablaze.

Calling his neighbors, Medlin did what lay in his power to extinguish the flames, but before he could accomplish that the blaze extended and consumed a harvester which had been parked right beside the garage and a Dodge automobile that was housed in the building at the time.

Fortunately, the efforts of the family and neighbors prevented the spread of the flames to the valuable home completed about two months ago by Mr. Medlin.

The harvester, the automobile and the garage, with some other farming utensils, were a complete loss.

Only partial insurance was carried on the building, the harvester and the Dodge. The total loss will exceed $7000 and will be seriously felt by Mr. Medlin.

PASSENGER TRAINS WILL STOP AT JEFFERSON STATION

For the convenience of families and workers employed near Jefferson Station and living in that locality, concession has been granted by the San Francisco-Sacramento Short Line so that two trains every day each way will stop to unload and pick up passengers.

Train No. 18, due in Sacramento at 12:30, and Train No. 26, due in Sacramento at 6:25, will stop on being flagged at Jefferson Station.

Train No. 19 westbound, leaving Sacramento at 7 A. M., and Train No. 9, leaving Sacramento at 4:40 P. M., will stop at Jefferson Station on being flagged to unload or pick up passengers.

The railroad company makes this concession at a time when it is endeavoring to cut the running time between Sacramento and Oakland from three hours and a quarter to three hours actual running time.

Commercial Agent Hal E. Willitts has recommended that the concession be granted.

RIGHT OF WAY FOR STATE HIGHWAY TO BE CONDEMNED

Woodland, Aug. 27.—Paving the way for the construction of a portion of highway out of Eastern Yolo County over the M Street bridge, giving travelers out of the county two main arteries of egress, the State Highway Commission yesterday instituted in the Superior Court of this county a condemnation suit against Thomas O'Connor and Mary M. Harbinson and two John Does, asking a right-of-way to the M Street bridge.

Superior Judge J. O. Moncur, sitting for Judge W. A. Anderson, now sitting on a Los Angeles superior court bench for the month, granted the application of Attorney Paul R. Fratessa of San Francisco for an order to declare the right-of-way open to the state, upon the filing of a check of $400 to pay for the 3.03 acres of land involved, $2000 damages and $10 for the unknown defendants. Judge Moncur made an order allowing the state and highway commission to go ahead with projected contract work, the trial to be held later to determine whether or not the amount of $2410 posted was sufficient to cover the cost of the land involved in the condemnation suit.

Thomas O'Connor, speaking to the Independent last evening, declared he would test the suit to a finish, declaring that any appraiser who is a judge of land values would acknowledge that three acres in the locality sought to be condemned would value the land at least at $2000 per acre.

Mrs Harbinson is of the same impression and will place the matter in the hands of an impartial jury rather than give up three acres of valuable town lots for $2410.

Over fifteen years ago a jury in the Superior Court of Yolo County awarded the Reed Orchard Company $1000 per acre for the Reed Orchard property, and certainly that land has improved in value during those fifteen years.

A block of land on Fifth Street in Washington not separated by more than 400 feet from the location sought to be condemned was sold some time ago for $17,000, and a block of land does not contain three acres.

RAILROAD OFFICIAL LIKES WASHINGTON BETTER THAN LOS ANGELES

T. M. Jefford, wife and daughter of St. Louis, spent the past week-end at the home of J. S. Lear in Washington and incidentally visited Sacramento and the surrounding territory during their stay.

Mrs Jefford is a sister of J. S. Lear, and since their last meeting several years have passed. Paul Lear of Stockton is another brother who is also visited by the easterners.

Mr. Jefford is agricultural agent for the M. K. & T. Railway at St. Louis, Mo. In that position he has served during several years and has visited, in pursuit of his work, nearly every state in the Union.

The visit last week-end was his second trip in the past few years, and on his way he stopped at Los Angeles, the Grand Canyon, Yosemite and other resorts. He declared he liked the climate and the locality around Washington better than Los Angeles.

DEMAND FOR HOMES IN WESTGATE CONTINUES ACTIVE

Even though real estate agents consider this season of the year the slackest in their business and there are hundreds of real estate firms in the state who acknowledge this, the fact remains that demand for homes in Westgate is active even now.

The arguments advanced in favor of Westgate as a home district are irrefutable. The district is as close to the postoffice in Sacramento as McKinley Park. Modern conveniences are obtainable in every section of Westgate. Good water, gas for home consumption, electricity for lighting are ready to be installed for any home owner who applies.

A good school is convenient in Washington with transportation for the children of Westgate to the school and return.

Perhaps the only drawback is the fact that street car service is not available at this writing, but it is also acknowledged that nearly every family now is possessed of some kind of an automobile for family service.

Many business men of Sacramento having homes as far east as Fortieth Street take occasion to walk to their work in the morning and walk home in the evenings, more or less for the exercise the walk affords. Yet Westgate is closer to the business section of Sacramento than McKinley Park.

Just as a sample it might only be mentioned that during the past week J. L. Howard purchased a home in Westgate for $6000 and will move from Sacramento into it in less than two weeks.

M. M. Christie purchased a lot on Block 56 on which he is about to start his bungalow.

Daniel Moran of Oakland purchased a home that was already built and expects to move his family into it next week.

William Mobley of North Sacramento bought Lot 8 in Block 57 and has already placed building material on the lot with which to build a home.

Last Sunday Roy Besley, representing the Goudey Mortgage Company of San Francisco, spent the day in Westgate looking over the ground with the idea of placing an agency permanently in the district.

These evidences go to show that home building in Westgate is not a delusion or a snare, but an actual fact.

A Sacramento man has his automobile stolen the other day and his bull dog was taken with it.
And yet the chief of police warns the people about State Fair depredations.

THE best monument ever erected to a man's memory is the building he puts up himself. Don't put off erecting that home from year to year—start in right now and get some comfort out of it yourself. And as we have said before it will pay you to purchase your lumber needs here.

Local family hoping for donations of furniture, household items

By Steve Marschke

A family new to West Sacramento is looking for help.

Roxanne Straw recently moved into a house on Kegle with her five children and her boyfriend, the kids' father. The family moved here from Portland because the youngest son, 6-month old Michael, is fighting a lung ailment and requires treatment at the UC Davis Medical Center.

"My son needs to be seen by a specialist here at UCD," said Straw. "Since we've been here, he's been in the hospital twice."

Straw added that Michael may have either an asthma problem or some kind of bronchial tree ailment, but doctors are waiting for his lungs to clear before he can be tested.

Her three girls and two boys range in age from Michael's six months to six years old.

Her boyfriend, who asked that his name not be printed, is looking for work ("body work or anything he can find," Straw said) and the family is subsisting on welfare. They have almost no furniture or household furnishings of any kind.

The local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has helped out, with church member Arlene Wilder bringing Shaw's family a blanket for the baby and a couch for the family. But Wilder and Straw ask that anyone who can spare other household items, including blankets, towels, cooking implements, dishes or furniture, please call Wilder at 371-2608.

Wilder told the News-Ledger that her fellow churchmembers may be able to arrange to pick up and deliver any donated items to Straw and her family.

HOPAKI AKOCHA INLACHI (old and new) is a large painting symbolizing the old and the new as the Northwest evil mask, representing the old traditional ways, looks down on the mask of the new generation and is separated by the fringe of tattered feathers interpreting the decay of the Choctaw Indian Nation.

The anguished cry of a nation is expressed with a dramatic contrast of a face highlighted on one side by a chartruese yellow color set in a very dark viridian green in the painting TOTEM OF THE WOLF. Again the cry of the individual symbolizes the cry of the people searching for an inner strength to survive the vicissitudes of life.

FEHNACHI, or Pride of Nation, uses feathers from different nations now tattered and worn, no longer the beautiful, perfect feather nature intended like the present situation with many of the Native Americans.

In KILIMPI (strength), a rock found on the Mendocino coast represents the long lasting power and strength of the Indian nations. FLUIDITY OF NATURE expresses flight and freedom. The bands of colors found in nature swirl in sweeping curves of motion.

Pierce is a graduating senior at College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland. He was awarded a scholarhip from the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma in 1993 to 1994. He was a recipient of the C.C.A.C. Academic Achievement Award 1990. A resident of West Sacramento, Mr. Pierce graduated from Christian Brothers High School with Departmental Honors Award 1990.

The exhibit is sponsored by the East Yolo Friends of the Library. A reception honoring the artist was held on Friday and was an exciting event to celebrate Adam Pierce's first one-person exhibit. The show can be viewed during library hours through the month of March.
